

FAITHFULLY FOCUSED

UNCOMFORTABLY NECESSARY CONVERSATIONS WITH JESUS

John 21

As I write this little bulletin article I am making a major assumption that you will have the opportunity to read it on Sunday. I do not know why it snows more often on Sunday than any other day of the week. It certainly seems to. I am very hopeful we can have our February business meeting tonight.

We welcome our guest worship leaders from Southwest Baptist University this morning. "Higher Ground" has led our students in worship during this weekend's Disciple Now. DNow is an important part of what we do and I am thankful for everyone who helped make it an impactful time for our students. Thank you, Jake Buxton, for giving leadership during this interim time.

"Call to Purity" weekend is just around the corner. Glenn & Jessica Muldrum, along with Jim Lewis, of Pure Life Ministry will be leading us. It would be helpful if you were to enroll today. The purpose of next weekend is to point us to the cross as the answer to the difficult issues of life.

Occasionally we deal with the difficult and uncomfortable. This morning, as part of our present sermon series, we are going to John 21. There are times when we must have "Uncomfortably Necessary Conversations With Jesus". Simon Peter had one. So must we.

What are the results of these difficult conversations?

Deal with it so you can _____.

Deal with it some you can _____.

Deal with it so you can _____.

Deal with it so you can _____.

Is there some uncomfortable but necessary conversation you need to have with Jesus?

Your Servant in Christ,
Bro. Monte
